

WEEK 1-3

Chengdu American Center in Cooperation with Fairleigh Dickinson University

Classes Begin

After the onsite in-person orientation, Chengdu experienced a small outbreak of COVID 19 and classes had to be held online. Because of our experience holding classes online, this transition went very smoothly. Students were able to get back to campus for face-to-face class soon. All courses went well during the first three weeks.

Special Topics: Corporate Finance class during the outbreak

Students from Visual and Media Literacy class having in-person class in the third week

Students from World Music class giving group performance

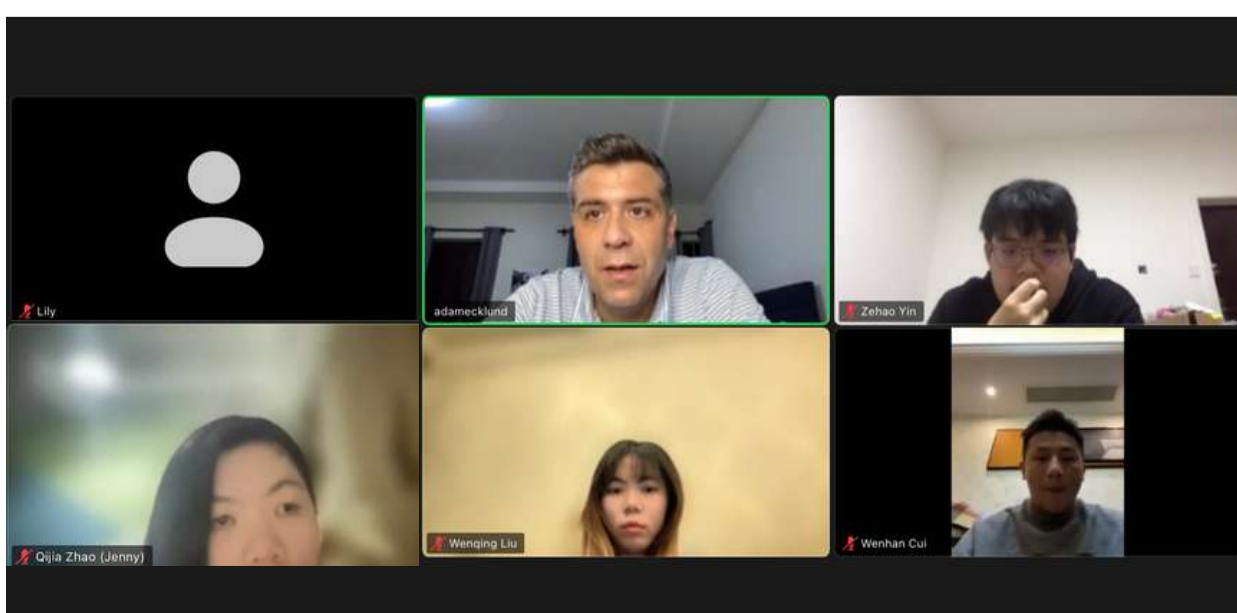

Wenhan Cui (Stevens Institute of Technology) doing some music editing under the guidance of his internship supervisor

Internship Program

G-MEO continues to offer a credit bearing internship program this spring. The internship program is highlighted with weekly online live class and onsite internship in Chengdu. This semester, students in this program have internship placements at national corporation, music studio, foreigners' community center, and a consultation company. By participating in our internship program, students can begin their career planning early, develop professional working skills, and learn to manage interpersonal relationships.

Live internship class

Add/Drop Classes

It is always our obligation to offer the kind of education that not only meets the students' academic requirements but also their personal interests. In the first two weeks, the students were able to change their courses after participating and auditing different classes. Student course selections are all set now.

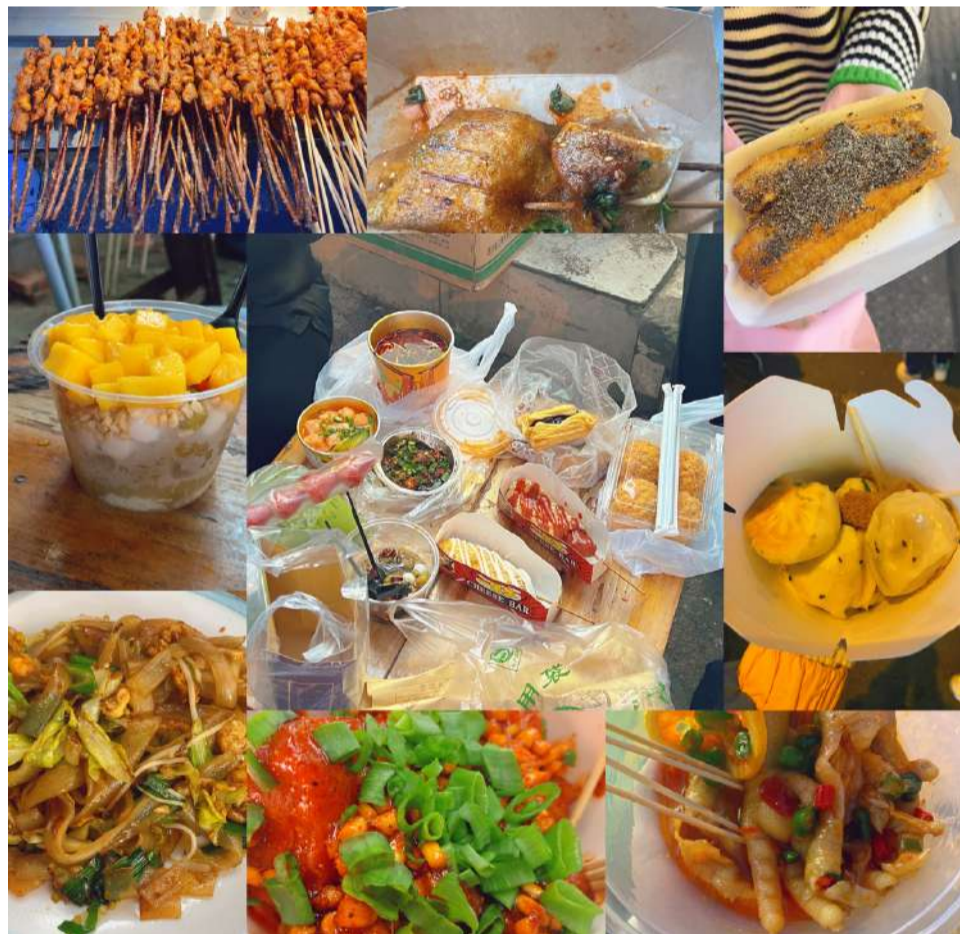

A very active class

A stylish food tour group!

Food Tour

Last Friday, the World Food and Culture class as well as some other students from our program went on a food tour of a famous area for street food near our campus. Students were given a fixed amount of money and were instructed to find and try as much food as possible based on their assigned category (color, temperature, flavor, texture), item (meat, vegetable, fruit, etc.), and serving method. At the end of this activity, the students learned more about food, had some fun and left the street satisfactorily with a full stomach.

Look at these delicious food and snacks!

Student Voice

"I like to DJ. My work here involves receiving young students and visitors who come to record music. My internship is quite fun and interesting. In the beginning, I felt a bit shy and reluctant to initiate conversation. With time I learned that the staff are nice and helpful. I have made many breakthroughs and tried things that I never did before."

--Wenhan Cui (Interning at a local music studio), Business Management major, Sophomore, Stevens Institute of Technology

Student Voice

"Studying at G-MEO is a quite pleasant thing. I went to the Shanghai program last semester and ended up with not making any friends. But in just a few weeks here, I not only reunited with my previous friends but also made some new ones. The professors and classmates are quite friendly and easy to get along with. The course design is reasonable and teaching quality is high. I have learned a lot. If possible, I want to continue my study with G-MEO next semester and take a further step towards completing my college academic requirements."

--Zehao Yin, Business Administration major, Junior, American University

Xingzhi Chen, Zehao Yin, Jiaxun Hu (all from American University)